

Burning Question

Your question: I'm wondering whether I should, in terms of a career move, pursue my passion for music or carry on as I am as a Software Developer.

Name: XXXXXXXX

Gender: Male

Age: 52

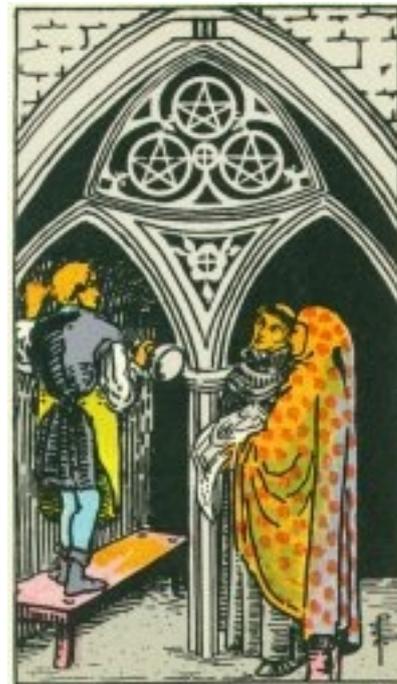

Deck: Ryder Waite

No. of cards: 2

Date: 11 Feb 2014

Card 1: The Sun

Card 2: Three of Coins

Your reading:

1. What is predicted for my future if I pursue a career in music?

The Sun in this position suggests you will gain greater clarity, insight and understanding by pursuing your passion for music. It also suggests optimism, success, vitality and enlightenment. This is a very positive card suggesting a positive future.

2. What is predicted for my future if I continue working in the field of software development?

The Three of Coins in this position predicts that you will be able to overcome any apathy you have been feeling in your current line of work, and will be able to apply yourself better as a result. This will help you to achieve more of a flow-state and overcome obstacles and difficulties which may have blocked you in the past.

Elissa's interpretation:

The Sun card suggests a bright and positive future if you pursue your passion for music. Our passions tell us about who we are and what we might want in life, so it isn't too surprising that the card in this position is such a positive one, indicating clarity and insight. This could mean that, as you take the path which fits with the 'inner you', more light is able to shine inside you, enabling you to see more clearly who you are. It could also mean that you have more clarity about your life path and your future in general.

The appearance of the Three of Coins suggests that your future in Software Development will become easier and less blocked over time. Any struggles you are currently experiencing should (perhaps with some self-development work) fade over time, and the work will become easier. However, the Three of Coins is a Minor Arcana card, which suggests a more prosaic future. The Minor Arcana relates to everyday life and the choices we make on a daily basis. The Sun card, in contrast, is from the Major Arcana, which relates more to our spiritual, contemplative side and the path we are on in this life. It asks us to look at the deeper, underlying themes of our life and to answer questions about who we really are.

From this reading I would suggest that the cards are asking you to make a choice between a career which is known, straightforward and which should eventually become easier for you; and one which is more in line with your true self. There is no judgment in this reading for either choice: one is not necessarily better than the other and the cards show that your future will be secure no matter which path you choose.

About your cards:

Light has always been a metaphor for truth. When we say we can 'see the light' we mean we can see the truth in a situation. When we talk about becoming 'enlightened' we mean achieving a level of understanding. As the supreme source of light the Sun is therefore a powerful symbol of knowledge and understanding. Ignorance may be bliss but knowledge is power. Only when we really understand a situation do we have the power to transform it and get what we want. The Sun is also associated with greatness and success, so when this card turns up it is a positive reminder that we too can be 'brilliant' and truly 'shine.'

The Three of Coins represents a need for competence. It is simply about planning, knuckling down and getting the job done. Many people focus on 'What can we have now?' without carefully planning or strategizing to achieve something worthwhile in the mid or long-term. Planning our lives more carefully can provide us with more fulfilment and meaningfulness, yet we do not need to do this alone. The three symbolizes a team - thus suggesting our plans can often best be made with more heads than just our own.
